

Jacob Mencher

After a short battle with cancer, Jacob Mencher passed away peacefully on March 2, 2022. Jay was a brilliantly witty artist, caricaturist, and highly skilled silkscreener beloved by his family and clients for his dedication, honesty & reliability.

He was adored by all for his personalized illustrated satirical birthday and holiday greetings. Jay was a lover of many genres of music from Beethoven to Yo Yo Ma to Jorma Kaukonen. He also loved to cook, coming up with new dishes to share at family holiday gatherings. Jay enjoyed his coffee and was rarely ever seen without a cup of coffee in his left hand. Jay loved driving his cars as evidenced by the ever-present suntan on his left arm.

The world was a better place with his presence and he'll be sorely missed by his brother, cousins, family and friends.

A memorial service honoring Jay will be held in New York at a future time.

Please find the link to the giving page below:

<https://www.nhrmc.org/nhrmc-foundation/make-a-gift/make-a-donation>

Area of Support

Designation: Stroke Fund

Tribute Wall

PS

“ During our college days Jake was my best friend and roommate. We had a great time meeting with friends, cooking some interesting meals, and just enjoying our college life together. We also had a great experience when we took a 400 mile bicycle trip through every type of weather conditions. We went on this trip on a whim and so we made no preparations. We were lucky to have met great people on our trip and even stayed at homes of some of the new friends we met.

Just recently, I was very happy that I was able to spend time with him on zoom with our good friend Wally. We hadn't seen each other for about 50 years but when we saw each other it was like we just spoke last week. A friend like Jake is one that you have for the rest of your life. Jake will be missed but will never be forgotten.

Philip Schnipper - March 05, 2022 at 05:11 PM

PM

“ So sorry to hear of your loss. Our sincere condolences.
Patti and Alan

Patti and Alan Miller - March 04, 2022 at 06:00 PM